Please join Copyright librarian, Virginia Adams, to learn more about the New Copyright Act, copyright compliance, and fair dealing exemptions for educational institutions.

Late last year Canadian copyright legislation underwent a transformative change. The Copyright Modernization Act came into force in November 2012 and with it new fair dealing language which allows for limited use of copyright protected works by educators. The fair dealing exemptions have a significant impact on the way in which copyrighted materials may be used in face-to-face and online classrooms.
